WELL WIDOW DENIES HILDEBRANDT'S PART IN LA HONDA MURDER

Mrs. Rodericks Changes Story of How Body
Of Rancher Was Taken To Well
After Fatal Shooting

Mrs. Minnie Rodericks, widow of the La Honda rancher, whose body was discovered buried in an abandoned well on his ranch, re-animated for officers of the county, the shooting of her husband, Mrs. Rodericks was taken to the La Honda ranch by Sheriff McGrath, Under Sheriff J. E. Ferrell, Constable Jack Grill, Jail Matron Dolly Grainger, District Attorney Franklin Swart, and Assistant District Attorney Edmund Scott.

To these officers Mrs. Rodericks explained in detail her version of the killing of Rodericks; re-enacting the scenes of that fatal day of May 15. According to the woman's story as acted out by her, the shooting of Rodericks was done by Will Woodring, hired man at the ranch. She then showed the officers how Woodring, Ernest Hildebrandt and herself loaded the body onto the running board of her car and took it to the well. The story as acted out by Mrs. Rodericks corresponded with the statement given by her to the district attorney on Monday.

Later the same evening Mrs. Rodericks denied that Hildebrandt had had anything to do with the murder and stated that it was Woodring and herself who had taken the rancher's body to the well after Woodring had shot him.

Woodring has so far maintained a stubborn silence except to deny the statements of Mrs. Rodericks and to say that she could tell about the murder if she wanted to. The first show of emotion by Mrs. Rodericks was at the grave in Alta Mesa cemetery when the body of Rodericks was being lowered into the grave. At that time she succumbed to a hysterical fit and had to be led away.

A crew of men under the direction of Sheriff McGrath and Constable Grill have been busy this week dragging a small lake on the Rodericks ranch in the belief that bodies of other victims of an organized cattle rustling ring might have been concealed in its waters. No bodies have been discovered, but the dragging operations are said to have brought forth a number of hides, some of cattle, others of deer, thought to have been killed out of season, or those of spike bucks and does.

The investigation which originally led to the discovery last week of Rodericks' body in the abandoned well, was begun months ago by Constable Grill, when reports were made of cattle rustling in the La Honda hills.

One angle of the case which remains a mystery to the investigators is the attitude of Hildebrandt, who was accused in Mrs. Rodericks' statement with having a part in burying Rodericks' body in the well. It was through statements made by Hildebrandt that officers first began to consider that Rodericks might have met with foul play and been thrown in the well. This was the first tangible evidence of the crime that was received.

Prior to that it was believed that Rodericks had made good his escape from the county through fear that his cattle stealing operations were becoming known. He was reported at one time to be living in a cabin in Big Basin, and a search of that district was made by Under Sheriff Farrell and Constable Grill.

Rodericks' body was buried Wednesday from the parlors of Layne & Tinney, where an inquest will be held next Tuesday by Coroner J. C. McGovern.

From the nature of the La Honda well case it is well within the realms of possibility that some one will pay the penalty by going to the gallows.

Thus far only two murderers were sent to the noose from this county. They were Harry Winter and C. H. Raymond, who held up a hotel in South Francisco in December 1897 and shot Gus Andrews, who resisted robbery. Andrews died next day from his wounds.

Harry Winter was convicted of first degree murder and sentenced to be hanged by Judge Buck. The late G. Plump was foreman of the jury that brought in the verdict. Winter expiated his crime on the gallows at Folsom on April 8, 1898.

Raymond was also hanged at Folsom some time after. He was ably defended by C. N. Kirkbride, then a young barrister fresh from college. He did not put the defendant on the stand to testify but relied on his two hours' argument to the jury to clear his client. The jury was only out a short time when a verdict of guilty was rendered.

Away back in the sixties a Chinaman was sentenced in the county to be hanged but he escaped the noose by breaking jail on the eve of the execution. In those days the hanging was done by the sheriffs. Everything was in readiness for the hanging. The scaffold was prepared in the rear of the courthouse. The night before the execution the heathen found it easy to escape the odium of stringing from the scaffold, which he could see from his cell in the jail close by, and "beat it." He was not re-captured. It was the current story then that the sheriff did not take to the idea of hanging his fellow man and so made it convenient for the celestial to escape. However, be that as it may, the Chinese did not swing by his tail or otherwise.

The atrocious crime committed at La Honda recalls a parallel case that occurred on an adjoining ranch in June 1902, when Joseph Brigran, a Swiss dairyman killed his henchman. The crime equals the murder of recent date in its aspect of horror and cold bloodiness. Its preparations similar. Brigran had the dairy for some months and owned him $100 for wages. Brigran killed the laborer in his cabin and buried the body in a dry water way about 200 yards from the scene of the murder. A boy named Koard, also employed by Brigran, on coming home saw the blood stains in the building and at once notified neighbors who acquainted the officers of their suspicions.

Constable Chatham traced the blood stains from the cabin to the creek bed and after a search dug up the nude body of Martil. The head was nearly severed from the body. Severe wounds were discovered on the bulky frame of the man. It was said that the crime was committed by Brigran to avoid paying the wages due the victim. At the time it was rumored that other men were killed for the same reason of saving the payment of wages. However, no other bodies were found on the ranch, although a thorough search was made.

Brigran was found guilty of first degree murder and sent to prison for life. He was defended by James T. O'Keefe and the late C. H. Easten.

Brigran was paroled from prison, two years ago and deported to his home in Switzerland. He is now an old man. Judge Buck presided at the case.

Redwood Man In Magic Program For Local Club

Exchangeites Entertained By Slight of Hand Tricks
At Meeting

Members of the Redwood City Exchange Club were given an interesting program of slight of hand tricks and parlor magic at their regular meeting this week by George Peterson of the Frank Tanning Company. Peterson has a splendid repertoire of tricks and is skillful in their performance.

The chairman of the meeting was Kendall B. Towne. An interesting feature of the meeting was the playing of C. G. Craig and Clarence Smith of Capitola on saxophones accompanied at the piano by Kendall Towne.

A good part of the evening was spent in discussing plans for the Exchange water carnival, which will take place here on July 15.

WASHINGTON

DEMOCRATS FAVOR WET PLATFORM

CENTRALIA, WASH.—June 29—(UP)—Washington State Democrats went one step further than their political foes, the Republicans, by choosing a thoroughly wet program here Saturday.

The Democratic party with over 300 delegates, in their biennial convention, choose a program which demanded the repeal of the 18th amendment by a vote of 250 to 116, but only after the dry party had put up an unexpected fight.

The program also declared in favor of state control and regulation of liquor and the Webb Kenyon law, which prevents interstate commerce of intoxicating liquors. The state laws, it was pointed out, would prevent the return of the saloons to which the party is decidedly opposed.

The platform adopted said in part: Pending repeal of the 18th amendment, we favor repeal of the Volstead Law and the Jones Five and

Theatre Again

The much discussed and heralded "Bolero" of Ravel will be given its initial hearing on the Pacific Coast next Sunday afternoon in the Woodland Theatre at Hillsborough in the second of the series of open air concerts, with Bernardino Molinari of Rome directing the summer orchestra.

Because of the over capacity audience which arrived last Sunday for the first of the fifth season concerts in the charming and intimate outdoor theatre, the management has made preparations during the week for increased seating arrangements anticipating another record audience because of the advance interest and inquiry as to the date of the "Bolero" program.

"Bolero" was originally written as a ballet of about twenty minutes length and was danced by Ida Rubinstein, to whom it was dedicated when first played a year ago in Workmen on the mountain ranch of Mayor Rolph of San Francisco, in the Alpine district of this county, found a human skeleton this week buried in the earth of the ranch. The bones were turned over to Deputy Sheriff Tom Maloney and brought to the jail here.

The bones are thought to have been those of an Indian, and apparently have been buried for many years as they are in a very poor state of preservation. The teeth also indicate the Indian origin of the skeleton, being worn almost to the bone as from eating acorn meal and uncooked food which was used by the Indians of this district.

Launch Burns At Redwood Harbor As Gas Ignites

Launch Helene, Property of
Charles Hildebrandt, Fire
Victim

Gasoline ignited by a lantern caused the destruction by fire Wednesday night at the municipal harbor of the launch Helene, owned by Charles H. J. Hildebrandt, city councilman and harbor commissioner. Hildebrandt, with "Al" Patrick and Bert Costa, were repairing the 28-foot craft at the time, and when it became apparent that it could not be saved, Hildebrandt scuttled the launch, so as to prevent the flames from reaching boats in the adjoining berths.

Richard Svihus, caretaker at the harbor, sent a call to the Redwood City fire department, and the firemen used 80 gallons of chemicals in getting the flames under control.

SCHOOLMATE OF LOCAL MEN DIES IN OAKLAND

Judge Frank J. Murasky, who passed away in San Francisco last Monday, often sat for Judge Buck in the Superior Court in this county. He was an able lawyer, a just and able jurist and a man of rare literary ability. He had few superiors as a profound orator.

Judge Murasky graduated with the class of 1884 from St. Mary's College when that institution was on Mission Road in San Francisco. D. E. O'Keefe and James T. O'Keefe of this city were members of that class. The friendship gained in college days grew stronger with the years among the trio.

Judge Murasky was a man of the highest character, a jurist of unimpeachable honesty and possessing a fine judicial mind. He will live long in the memory of those who knew him. All old St. Mary's men mourn his loss.

Legion Plans Dance For Convention Fund

A dance will be given on the evening of Saturday, July 19, in the War Memorial hall on Warren street by Redwood City Post No. 105 American Legion. This dance is being given as a benefit to the fund being raised by the post to send its drum corps to the state convention of the American Legion to be held in Sacramento next month. JAMES ROLPH III AIDS IN CAMPAIGN

An infant in rempers when his father, Mayor James Rolph, Jr., first stepped into the political arena in San Francisco, James Rolph III today is one of the most active of the thousands of workers in the campaign of his dad to secure the Republican nomination for governor at the August primaries.

Well educated, of pleasing appearance and good address, the junior Rolph has proved on the public platform that he is fully conversant with the issues of the fight, and able to put over telling points in his father's behalf.

James Rolph III has devoted much study to the subjects of taxation, state government and finance. He has a fund of information concerning the agricultural and industrial life of California. He has addressed numerous Rolph meetings in San Francisco and out in the state and, like the Mayor, he is "going day and night" in the big campaign.

The Mayor's son was a witness to the signing by the Matthew I. Sullivan of an affidavit changing the latter's party registration from Democratic to Republican in order that he could vote at the primaries for the Mayor. Mayor Rolph and Sullivan, former chief justice of the California Supreme Court, have been friends for half a century.

EXCHANGE CLUB PLANS 5TH ANNUAL CARNIVAL OF SWIMMING EVENTS

Local Club To Be Hosts To District At Barbecue To Be Followed By Annual Water Spree

The Redwood City Exchange Club will hold its Fifth annual water carnival this year on July 15 at the Sequoia pool. The water carnival, like the Exchange Christmas party, has become a community event looked forward to every year as one of the big times of the season.

This year the plans for the water carnival are being made by Jim Eva, member of the club and also swimming instructor of the Sequoia Union High School. Arrangements for a big barbecue, which will precede the water carnival, are being made by John J. Garland, county milk inspector.

The barbecue will take place on the grounds of the Sequoia Union High School at 6:30. This will be attended by members of all Exchange clubs of the district. The tank will be open at 5 o'clock for those who wish a dip before supper. At 8 o'clock the big event of the evening will be started.

Starting with rather a humble beginning, the Exchange water carnivals have been better and better every year, and have attracted spectators in ever increasing numbers. Last year the seating capacity of the bleachers was overtaxed and many stood on tops of surrounding buildings to witness the fun. An even better program of swimming and diving acts is promised this year with many comedy numbers thrown in to add to the interest of the evening.

The money raised by the annual water carnival is used for the club's scholarship to the Sequoia Union High School.

Grass Fires Start Open Season Here

The grass fire problem of Redwood City apparently began its summer season on Tuesday when the fire department answered three calls to grass fires. Two of the calls, however, were for one fire.

The department answered a phone call to a fire near Woodside road and Linden avenue. While going to this fire a call was sent in from box 34 for the same fire. The fire was soon brought under control with no damage done.

Earlier in the day the department was called to a grass fire on Durston avenue and Copley avenue in Edgewood Park.

The fire menace in Redwood City has been considerably diminished this year through the efforts of the fire department, which has been for several weeks busily engaged in burning over grass lots and clearing fire hazards.

MRS. A. C. EDWARDS PASSES AWAY HERE

Harvey Cameron Edwards, who for several years was clerk in the office of the county superintendent of schools here, passed away yesterday at the Community hospital, following a protracted illness. Mrs. Edwards was the widow of Harry D. Edwards, and was a sister of Mrs. Ludwig Wender of this city.

In addition to Mrs. Wender she is survived by her mother, Mrs. Nellie Cameron, and the following sisters and brother, Mrs. C. Kitzmeyer, Mrs. S. B. Warren and Don W. Cameron.

Mrs. Edwards was a native of Washington and was 40 years of age. She was a skilled secretary, and in that capacity accompanied Col. Scruggam, former governor of Nevada, throughout Europe during the war. She served as deputy superintendent of schools here when Roy W. Cloud was superintendent of schools of this county.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock at the parlors of the James Crowe Company.

Cremation will take place at the crematorium of Cypress Lawn cemetery.

Brush Fire Is Out in Alpine

A fire in the Alpine district not far from the Shriners' Park, was extinguished early Wednesday morning after having burned over about ten acres of brush land. The flames were extinguished by the Woodside fire department and volunteer firemen before any serious damage had resulted. There is no need for Porterville residents to walk if they prefer to ride. Figures just released at the office of the city clerk list 2,484 motor cars for a population of 5,367, virtually one car for every two residents.

In its program of keeping down dust on heavily traveled highways the State Department of Public Works has awarded contracts for oiling nearly forty miles of road in San Luis Obispo, Sonoma and Mendocino counties.

Work of remodeling the Vallejo Theater is under way, under the supervision of L. S. Hicks, Vallejo contractor. The Fox West Coast Theaters intend to spend in the neighborhood of $13,300 in the rebuilding of the structure, which was destroyed by fire during the early spring.

The Jackson-Markeville road over Carson Pass, Alpine County, at an elevation of 8,500 feet has been opened to traffic according to the state division of highways. In view of the heavy late snows, this was considered an early opening. The road will be left open on Saturday nights and Sundays.

Trout planting of the many mountain streams in Santa Cruz County has started and 10,000 trout from the Brookdale hatchery were planted in Mill Creek recently. About 300,000 good sized trout are in the hatcheries at Big Creek and Brookdale and many of them will be shipped to Petaluma where they will be served as chicken food. Some of the best animals in the wild herds will be claimed. Many are advertised for sale under the state estray law.

Wild horses, increasing to such numbers in the Modoc National Forest that they have become a menace to domestic stock, faced an inauspicious end. They are being rounded up by riders under the direction of P. H. Huffman, manager of the SX ranch, and many of them will be shipped to Petaluma where they will be served as chicken food. Some of the best animals in the wild herds will be claimed. Many are advertised for sale under the state estray law.

California was $5,000,000 poorer to day as the result of a State Supreme Court decision. The court ruled that the Southern Pacific's lines in Alameda County are street and interurban lines and can not be taxed by the state on the basis of their being part of the steam railroad system. Under the 1921 King tax bill, the tax on steam roads is 7 per cent of gross earnings, while the tax on street railways is only 5 1/2 per cent. The difference in the tax amounts to $5,000,000, which the company has not paid.

For the first time in trout hatching operations by the state of California, Tulare County fish are furnishing their own eggs for the purpose. Half a million rainbow trout eggs will have been taken from 895 fine specimens trapped in Hamilton Lake as the result of co-operation between the national park service and the State Fish and Game Commission. Thus far 65,000 eggs have been taken for hatching at the state hatchery east of Visalia.

The phrase, "streets of gold" has a literal meaning when applied to Nevada City. During excavation for the erection of a power pole at the main junction of streets in the business section, a highly mineralized quartz ledge was uncovered by workmen. Free gold was found in the rock and only the fact that the "strike" is located in the town's main street kept miners from locating the claim. The power company in installing a new set of poles along the business section have been experiencing much difficulty with rock. Blasting has been resorted to at this particular point. It was thought that they had encountered a large boulder but the striking of high grade ore shows that they are in the bed rock and have tapped the old Nevada County ledge.

G. E. Wood, one of two full-time members of the Coumanga volunteer fire department, has been placed in charge of all fire apparatus by order of the City Council. The order followed a controversy which arose when the fire apparatus became disabled en route to a fire recently.

A five girl track team will represent Eureka at the national girls' track and field meet at Boston, Mass., in July. Funds have been offered by Eureka business men. Miss Bessie Marshall is coach of the team.

Move to secure a county park at Milliken bridge, southwest of Turlock, was made recently. Creation of a park at Milliken would provide resort facilities for people of Hillman and Turlock and the surrounding vicinities.

All but five of the 475 instructors in Fresno city schools will return to their positions next fall, it was announced by O. S. Hubbard, superintendent of schools. A majority of teachers have been reassigned to their last year's schools, with a few released on leave of absence.

The Santa Cruz Commercial Fishermen's Association started the first move to ban commercial seining of sardines on the Santa Cruz side of the bay and are working to establish a reserve so that the fish that follow sardines for feed, such as yellow tail, skipjack, tuna and albacore, will be more plentiful.

Several positions as physicians and psychiatrist at the State Hospitals for the Insane are not only unfilled but practically without applicants, according to report made by the State Civil Service Commission. Physicians at these hospitals, it is pointed out, receive salaries ranging from $170 to $270 a month, with full maintenance for the physician.

Turlock's prisoners will now have to work for their board and lodging in the city jail. The city council has adopted a plan making it necessary for all prisoners to work on city projects. In addition to cutting down bills for maintenance of the jail, the plan will benefit the city treasury by fewer expenditures for municipal improvements, councilmen pointed out.

The United States destroyer Hazelwood, used for the training of Bay District naval reserve officers and sailors for the last five years, is to be decommissioned. Lambertson has been selected to relieve the Hazelwood, and will be overhauled and recommissioned.

Application for diversion of water from Fall Creek and South Fork Fall Creek, Nevada County, for irrigation and power purposes, is on file with the state division of water rights. The proposed water project calls for construction of a concrete dam, 20 feet high and 150 feet long; construction of a 22,000-foot concrete conduit costing $450,000, and diversion of 20 cubic feet of water per second for irrigation of 167,789 acres of general crops land.

Further procedure in the formation of an improvement district in Delhi land settlement colony has been taken by directors of the Turlock Irrigation district. The action came with a final checkup of petitions asking for the district. Engineers were authorized to report later on the feasibility of the proposed project. The proposed district comprises 6,142 acres, 26 pumping plants and 100 miles of underground cement pipe lines, in addition to 90 miles of privately owned pipe lines.

To preserve state parks as nearly as possible in their natural state, while providing necessary highway facilities, the state division of highways is making a study of road construction in scenic areas with a view to reducing to a minimum the temporary disfigurement of the landscape during highway construction. This was announced following a conference at Sacramento between officials of the division of highways and the division of parks. In the Redwood high way many changes of highway alignment have been made to avoid destruction of trees. New cuts and fills are to be improved by replanting native vegetation.

California's water replenishment from snow and rainfall during the last winter was shown to have been below normal in all parts of the state except in a small area surrounding San Diego, in a survey just completed by State Engineer Edward Hyatt at Sacramento as a part of the statewide water resources survey. The greatest deficiency occurred in the north coast area, which was declared to be adequately moist nevertheless, and in the southern part of the San Joaquin Valley, where, on the other hand, a shortage is always a serious matter. A striking feature of the wet season as shown by the study was that the rainfall and snowfall after December 1 was practically normal in the Sacramento Valley, the northern San Joaquin Valley, the Sierra and the central and southern coastal regions. Very little rain fell anywhere in the state before that date.

With summer here and the great danger of forest fires, the United States Forest Service has completed arrangements for an airplane forest patrol. Two planes of the Associated Airways Ltd. have been engaged for patrol in northern California. These planes will not operate on regular beats but will be used for scouting. Following electrical storms and during periods of smoke and haze when visibility on the ground is poor, the planes will be used to search for fires. The planes will be used to scout large fires, and the observers will drop parachute messages to the fire fighters telling wind direction, speed of the fire and the best points to concentrate the fighters. Similar service will be provided for the forest patrol in southern California. With increasing fire hazards due to hot weather and lack of rain, the thirteen national forests in the state have been closed to smoking. Smoking will be permitted only at designated spots in the forests.

Hereafter there will not be any more burial permits issued for interments at the Carquinez cemetery on Sundays, according to action taken by the city council.

William L. Williams, who has had his headquarters at Red Bluff and at Mineral for 13 years as district ranger in the Lassen National Forest, has been promoted to district ranger of the Klamath National Forest, with headquarters at Yreka. W. J. Brokenshire will become district ranger in the Lassen forest.

Sunday evening, July 13, has been definitely set as the date for production of "Eras of the Red Trees," the famous theme play given annually beneath the shadow of the oldest and largest of living things. This year the production is presented by the Visalia Chamber of Commerce free of charge.

At cost of $27,000, Oakdale will have seven miles of streets. Resolution to undertake the work has been passed by the city council, which accepted the estimated cost presented by City Engineer George Macomber.

Many of the present generation remember the famous bloody feud of the Hatfield and McCoy families in West Virginia. This is a new and interesting photograph of the present Hatfield family. They all hold public office in the town of Williamson, West Virginia, with the exception of the mother and the youngest son. They are, left to right: (seated) Mrs. Greenway Hatfield, Sr.; Mayor Wirt Hatfield; Sheriff Greenway Hatfield, Sr.; and Jaller Wayne Hatfield. Standing, left to right: Assistant Postmaster Shade Hatfield; Postmaster Willard Hatfield; and Greenway Hatfield, Jr., who is attending the University of West Virginia.

FEED LESS GRAIN DURING SUMMER

Keep Fowls Confined and Increase Their Mash.

Summer feeding schedule for laying hens calls for reduction in the amount of grain and increase in the amount of mash, poultry specialists at the Ohio State university have notified Ohio poultrymen who are keeping records in co-operation with the county and state extension service.

"Gradually reduce the amount of grain feed and increase the mash consumption in order to maintain summer production," says one of the specialists, P. B. Zimbro. "It is wise to feed all the grain in the evening in order to make the birds hungrier for mash during the day."

"Another good plan is to keep the birds confined to the house until afternoon. If the house can be properly ventilated, this will stimulate mash consumption and at the same time allow ample opportunity for green feed."

"Another way is to put mash hoppers where you find the birds during the day—under a tree, in a shed, or wherever they congregate. Mix enough milk with the ordinary mash to make it crumbly wet, and feed such quantities as the hens will consume in a half-hour."

Clean Feed Essential to Complete Success

Clean feed is essential to the complete success of a sanitation program. It is not sufficient to mix or buy clean feed. The entire ration must be kept clean until the chickens have an opportunity to eat it. No feed of any kind should be scattered in the litter or on the floor for the growing chicks. Nor should it be scattered on the ground unless care is taken to throw it in a fresh place each day in order, as some one has said, to give the chickens a clean tablecloth. Grain, as well as mash, can be hopper fed with very good results, especially after the chickens are partly grown.

After the chickens are ranging out-of-doors move the feed hoppers to a new location once a week. If possible, they should be in the shade at least a part of the day in order to encourage the chickens to eat freely. The water fountains should be so arranged that there will be no permanent puddles of water or mud as these make the finest kind of place in which worm eggs can rest while waiting for some chicken to pick them up.

Avian Tuberculosis Is Widespread in the West

Avian or bird tuberculosis is widespread. The first case was discovered in a prairie chicken by Dr. L. Van Es when he was pathologist for the North Dakota agricultural college. The latest surveys of the United States bureau of animal industry indicate that 6 per cent of the flocks on physical examination in 28 states showed tuberculosis. The disease affects a greater percentage of the flocks in some of the middlewestern states. Avian tuberculosis must be entirely eliminated from flocks. Campaigns are under way in the middlewestern states, where avian tuberculosis is the greatest, to stamp out the disease.

Poultry Facts

Goose eggs require 30 to 35 days in which to hatch.

Eggs are rich in valuable minerals and are a great source of vitamins.

Grit in some form is essential to ducks, and should be kept before them at all times.

Now that practically all chicks are hatched the male birds should be sold or used on the home table. Practically no male birds on the average farm should be kept more than one year.

It is important that the hens be provided with some source of green feed constantly.

A good way to feed hay to poultry is to cut it into inch lengths and then put it into a wire-netting basket feeder and keep it before the hens at all times.

Turkey hens like to find their own nests. Some time in advance of the laying season, make nests where it is convenient for them to lay, in a secluded place.

The size of eggs is almost, if not quite, as important as their number. Set eggs from hens which lay standard-sized eggs.

Early chicks are the only type of chicks that will mature soon enough so that they will be matured and start laying at the best season of the year.

Dust wallows are a source of much pleasure to the hens during the summer months. Spade up the fresh, moist earth in the shade, and the hens will do the rest.

Hatching eggs are worthless unless they hatch a relatively high percentage of chicks.

The Pekin duck is most popular for table use, but there are other excellent varieties if one prefers them.

While she is confined to the brood coop the turkey hen should get a mixture of farm grain, such as equal parts of oats, corn and wheat, with green feed, water and grit. Sometimes a little beef scrap or fresh lean meat helps.

INJURED, BROKEN, MENED HEARTS

(By D. J. Walsh)

STEVEN sat in the little summer house on the bank of the lake. Stricken. Agitated. He watched the green and white boat which was Susan's canoe grow smaller as it headed for her home dock.

In all the years since they were children and had been coming with their families for the summers at Crescent lake he had never seen her so angry with him. At his feet on the plank floor glittered the platinum ring, with its square diamond, over which she had been so happy a few months before when their engagement was announced.

With a little groan Steven twined one arm around the rough bark of the railing and dropped his head upon it. Life without Susan was unthinkable. Susan—the girl whose little form could shoot through the water with a speed equal to his, who quarreled with him and laughed with him, but who he had felt certain always loved him!

Her words still rang in his ears. "I won't marry a jealous man!" she had cried. "The idea of your objecting to my going around with George Randerpool when we've known his people so well and everything! I had to be polite to him, didn't I, while he was here at the hotel?"

Perhaps some of Susan's wrath came from the fact that secretly she felt a little guilty. Even the most loyal young woman may not be able to resist frank admiration such as had been expressed by Randerpool's dark eyes looking into her pensive blue ones. And perhaps she had wanted to torment Steven a trifle. He was so sure of her. And the little quarrel had ended by her breaking their engagement.

Now resentment was beginning to stir within Steven when he dimly was aware that his name was being called from the door of the little summer house. He looked for some seconds at Isabel Dewey, teetering back and forth on her rubber heels, before he comprehended that she wanted his attention.

"Gracious!" she said at last in her singularly low voice. "Are you asleep? We want a fourth at doubles—come on!"

It would always be like that, Steven thought bitterly as he got to his feet. Life always would be interrupting a man's tragedies by a call to dinner or something equally silly. He attacked the ball vigorously and he and Isabel won three sets.

"You were a champion last year at college, weren't you?" she asked admiringly when it was over. "There was something very gratifying to him in her frank admiration just then, although before today he had not been attracted to her. Before he knew it, as they walked along, he was telling Isabel about his broken engagement. Why not? By tomorrow all the summer resort would know the news.

Isabel Dewey bent on him a look which was a combination of surprise and sympathy. "Now, you've got to be brave, Steven," she told him. "You can't let this wreck your life! When ever you just have to talk about it you come to me!"

It was really very decent of her, Steven thought, to appreciate his trouble so keenly. There was more to Isabel than he had thought.

There was. It is one thing to make kittenlike dabs at another girl's property and entirely different when the property is delivered into one's hands.

Before Steven realized it he was spending most of his time with Isabel Dewey, and her mother rocking on the hotel veranda was already planning Isabel's trousseau and furniture. It would be a triumph for her daughter to capture Steven Blossom, hand some, charming and, hitherto considered as hopelessly ensnared by Susan Card, Susan, much to Mrs. Dewey's relief, had removed herself from the scene the day after her quarrel with Steven. She had gone to Randerpool for an indefinite visit—and had left no word for Steven.

He told himself that he had definitely put her out of his mind, was finding out what a wonderful girl Isabel Dewey was—sympathetic to a degree never betrayed by Susan, a true woman! They canoeed in the moonlight after their daily tennis and insensitively their talk drifted from Steven's broken romance to just romance. But the good folk at the clinic worked to save Manci, and they have triumphed.

Some Requirements of Capable Motor Driver

The competent motor driver knows that his car is in proper condition before he takes it out. Brakes must be functioning well, all lights, including the headlights, both bright and dim, the parking lights, the tail light, the dash lights and the ceiling light, must be in working order, and the tires should have their quota of air pressure to the square inch.

Having ascertained that all is ready, he may take his seat.

He should then stop and think whether he knows the local regulations for a right and left turn in whatever jurisdictions he may plan to visit; whether he knows their respective speed limits and parking laws. If he has these things clear in his mind, he may start the car; provided:

That he can watch his speedometer, his oil pressure gauge, his gas gauge, his rear view mirror and the road all at one and the same time; and further provided:

That he can keep one foot on the clutch, one on the brake, one hand

these. With her dark eyes raised to his, her face came pale in its light, she was enough to thrill any young man's heart. After all, Steven began to think when he at last tired of waiting daily for what the postman never brought, after all it was just as well he had found out in time that he and Susan were not suited to each other. The cause of their quarrel, George Randerpool, was back at the hotel, but on him Steven bent an indifferent eye. He was too dapper to suit a brawny athlete like Steven, but he was popular with the women and girls.

It did not occur to Steven that Isabel might be attracted because she had so devoted herself to him since his trouble. And when one night, instead of finding her waiting for him in their special veranda corner, Steven stumbled upon Isabel standing in the moonlight with George Randerpool, her hand in his, the same light in her eyes she had bent on himself, it was a distinct shock.

This was too much. He felt that he was through with women forever and all of Isabel's efforts to talk to him the following day he successfully foiled. That it was injured pride instead of a broken heart in this case was what he did not realize. Very tall, very white, he stalked about the woods, solitary, musing upon life in general and girls in particular. There was a dull ache within him which he could not identify, but of one thing he was sure. He did not care if never again he laid eyes on Susan Card or Isabel Dewey, or any girl whatever! Steven made things very difficult for his family during those weeks elapsing before he should leave for his last year in an eastern college. His patient mother thought grimly of the things she should like to say to both the young women who had brought him to this pass. And Susan, in her opinion, was pre-eminently the one and only girl for her son. But she learned not to mention her name. She kissed him goodnight and sent him on his way at last.

He sat in the little launch bearing him away to the village and the train. His mother stood, a placid, middle-aged figure, on their dock, waving longingly in his direction, a tiny speck of white in one hand occasionally dabbing her eyes. This was the fourth year she had waved him goodbye and Godspeed—and it was the first time that another figure, slighter, taller, golden, had not waved more vigorously but as yearningly from the end of the car's dock. Steven's lips were set hard as he waved his hat in response to his mother. The unidentified ache roiled over and through and well-nigh obliterated him. The constant nagging at his inmost soul which had tortured him for weeks suddenly grew into an intolerable hurt and his throat swelled as it might have done ten years before.

Man though he was, there was a film over his eyes and the launch approaching them from the direction of the village was almost abreast before Steven noted its single passenger. As he recognized Susan Card in the stern seat, Susan a trifle thinner and very sober, the unidentified ache within him suddenly vanished. The mere sight of her cured it. She saw him at the same moment.

Both of them sprang to the sides of their boats, reaching out to each other—and because the boatmen knew the affairs of the lake people, and these two especially, with no directions whatever from their fares they hooked their crafts about and shut off their engines. In the stillness the two launches drifted together and two hands clasped at last. There were tears in Susan's eyes.

"What an idiot I've been, Steven!" she gasped.

"You've nothing on me," Steven stammered in his relief and excitement. And there in the middle of Crescent lake they kissed each other for all the world to see if it chose.

Astronomical Watch

An astronomical watch, the gem of the Packard collection, now in the Smithsonian Institution, strikes the hour and minutes and has a perpetual calendar and a miniature sky in which 500 stars appear in true relation with one another—concealed machinery keeping them in their correct positions each hour of the night. The watch shows the time of sunrise and sunset, and has a separate minute hand which shows the difference between the regular time of day and the time as it appears on a sundial.

Tiniest Human Being

There is great joy in a Budapest clinic because Manci is beginning to walk and talk. Manci is believed to be the tiniest normal baby ever born. Instead of weighing about 120 ounces, she weighed 21 ounces, and at three weeks old was only just over 12 inches long. Doctors from Vienna, Berlin and Paris went to inspect the world's tiniest baby, and no one held much hope of her survival. But the good folk at the clinic worked to save Manci, and they have triumphed.

Seeing Big League Baseball

By BILLY EVANS

Sports writer, Big League Umpire and General Manager of the Cleveland Indians

Making my debut as a world series umpire, I faced the biggest crowd in the history of the annual clash up to that time. It numbered about 35,000 people. Some crowd way back in 1909.

On account of the overflow crowd it was necessary to have ground rules. Temporary stands had been erected in front of the permanent ones along the right field line. They extended over to the permanent stands that stretched across the outfield, and joined them at a sharp angle just at the foul line. Ground rules were, that a ball hit fair into the permanent seats was a home run, and a ball hit fair into the temporary stands was good only for a two-base hit. It may sound to the reader like a pretty fine distinction, but about the only possibility of hitting a ball fair into the stands to the right of the foul line lay in its striking fair in the outfield and bounding in. The stage was all set for the toughest decision I was ever called upon to make during my entire career.

I think it was in Pittsburgh's half of the first inning that the decision in question came up. However, it makes little difference. The point is that, with a man on third base, "Boys" Miller, Pittsburgh second baseman, hit a terrific drive to right field. I was behind the plate, Bill Klem working the bases. The decision, therefore, was up to me. It was apparent, once the ball was hit, that my work was cut out for me, so I watched its course quite carefully. The pesky thing, after hitting the ground very close to the foul line, bounced high into the air and disappeared into the stands, where it was caught and pocketed by a souvenir-hunting roofer. Which stand it went into I didn't know; it was so close to the foul line.

Here was a dilemma. "Good Lord," thinks I, "what are you going to call it, a two-bagger or a home run?"

Fred Clarke, Pittsburgh manager, came up. "What is? You're not going to call it a two-base hit, are you?"

And Hughie Jennings and a group of his Tigers came to me, protesting vehemently that it was not a home run.

"Get away, all of you," I shouted, "until I talk it over with Klem." Here was a decision that simply had me "buffed." I needed time to think it over, time to confer with Klem before I could give anything that looked like an intelligent ruling. I felt that I was a disgrace to myself and to baseball. Finally, for no particular reason than to think, I started walking out toward right field, right to protection. And any guy that thinks a chance to give gives him the right to turn his head-dawg on four-wheels loose too quick and let it jump before a decent walker has a chance to reach the curb in safety is a low, mean, contemptible hawg. He ain't even a self-respectin' hound.

Signal Arm on Auto

Many devices have been invented to take the place of the outstretched hand as a warning by the chauffeur when about to make a turn or stop. In London one that seems to have met with general approval by practical use is operated by compressed air. It consists of an arm with an illuminated disk on the extremity. A button on the steering wheel enables the driver to give the signal to his follower or with the least possible exertion. When not in use the signal is out of sight.

Night Baseball Games Are Meeting With Much Favor

Night baseball now has been on trial long enough to be termed a moderate success. Eleven minor league clubs have committed themselves to give the innovation a tryout this season, and it is sure that with such encouragement electrical manufacturing concerns will endeavor to improve the illumination until it is thoroughly satisfactory to both players and fans. Secretary Taylor, the Des Moines sports authority, who first viewed Lee Keyser's experiment in the Iowa city with considerable doubt, is well sold on the idea. His opinion of night baseball is:

He agreed, and I lost no time getting back and making my decision.

That, I think, was the toughest decision of my career. Certainly none ever came in a tougher spot. Maybe I have had others occasionally that at the time were equally as perplexing, but not in such an important game.

Players of both the home and visiting teams are enthusiastic over the way the night games are working out, and the fans appear to be well satisfied with the innovation."

water is hot. Such leaks are difficult to find and repair. The smallest leak, however, can be detected at once by applying air pressure to the cooling system. This may be done by using part of an old inner tube and a piece of cork. Use the cork to plug the overflow pipe and cut a circle of rubber from the inner tube with the valve at the center. Remove the filler cap and bind the section of the inner tube over the opening as shown. Pressure is then applied with a tire pump. Only a few strokes are required. Be very careful not to apply too much pressure to avoid damaging the radiator. The radiator of an automobile is not designed to withstand pressure. Too much may open up a seam or bulge out the side of the upper or lower water tanks.—Popular Science Monthly.

Why We Behave Like Human Beings

By GEORGE DORSEY, Ph. D., LL. D.

Propaganda for Sanity

IS EDUCATION attempting to encourage creative thought, or merely trying to divert thinking into old channels and so stifle it entirely? Thinking on old lines is to continue in the same old way regardless of reason or intelligence. Thinking soundly is to wake up and ask questions; it is to make new creations possible.

I went through one school and was halfway through another before I woke up and discovered that I was alive; that it is no sin to question anybody or anything; and that there are several problems yet unsolved! It was quite too long before I realized the difference between "That is so" and "That is necessarily so"; quite too long before I realized that going to college did not necessarily mean anything in particular.

Curricula change and lists of "electives" grow like weeds, but the human nature in the professors and in the pupils remains the same. The school merely demands that a certain amount of a specified number of courses be absorbed; the success of a course is measured by the number that take it. The curriculum itself reads like a mail-order catalogue. No conceivable course is omitted, except one on life and how to get more out of it with less friction to others and less lost motion to the liver.

All this may sound like propaganda. It is. Propaganda for sanity; for enlightenment; for brain work; for time to live and the acquisition of a few simple tools to live with; for understanding; for such clarity as will abolish the need for aims; for honesty in rulers and intelligence in legislation; for critical judgments; for dispassionate opinions; for hatred of shams, intolerance, falsehood, and deception; for riddance of quacks, mountebanks, impostors, charlatans, vermin, squalor, and ignorance; for a car for every family and a joy ride through life for every one; for socially useful behavior.

Everything that man has made, done, said, and thought, has been built on the impulse to live, organic hunger for food and mate, fashioned, molded, and reinforced by the emotional drive in life. Every normal human being has that equipment at birth. It is in the very marrow of the child's bones, in the protoplasm of his nerves.

It can be encouraged to grow, to expand, to blossom, to bear fruit. It may produce an inspiring leader who will show the way and be the way to bring a new order into the world of human affairs.

Society may kill him. Never mind. Society will build a monument to him in admiration of his having dared to be a leader. The least we can do is to keep our hands off the courage of youth.

Emotional drives are not new in man, or even in Primates. The nervousness, the uniqueness, are man's responses. Rage and fear once led to fight or flight; they now supply the drives which may lead to drink, to burglary, to murder, to insanity, to suicide even.

As Thomas points out, the day-dreamer may become a scientist, a swindler, or a liar; the adventurer, a vagabond, cowboy, missionary, geologist, or ethnologist; the killer may shoot big game with a rifle or with a camera.

The problem, then, is such a reorganization of society that socially useful behavior shall be at least as profitable and interesting as unsocial or criminal behavior.

What is wrong with the picture? Each one, I repeat, will have his own opinion and his own remedy—and will be ready enough to express opinion and remedy, and back up both with hot argument, if necessary. But what will he do about it?

Parents will continue to do business with unsocial or criminal professions, and teachers will probably labor in vain for a living wage; but there is one thing both parents and teachers can do; give youth the opportunity to become conscious of society, of human life, of humanity; encourage it to think, to speculate, to evaluate, to weigh evidence, to become disengaged, to choose, to see through things, to see things and life objectively. Critical consciousness.

How has "progress" been made in medicine, in chemistry, in physics, in engineering, in all the respects in which progress has been made? By doubts, by questionings, by testings of hypotheses, by solutions of problems, by critical activity in the human cortex.

Man is a free moral agent and can be magnanimous and decent, disinterested, humanity is a definite goal, social justice is desirable and possible, individual lives may be gloriously diversified, uniquely individualized, and yet socially useful; or, these are mere phrases, snares to catch gulls, soothing sirup for troubled souls. Here again, opinions will differ; but no one will pretend that society today is organized (as a living organism is organized) or that social relations are one whit more intelligently ordered than in the days of Pericles or Julius Caesar.

The problem, then, narrows down to this: children of nature and creatures of circumstances as we are, can we discover what organic evolution is up to and can we help it on its way?

Human Vocal Cords

The length of the vocal cords of men is estimated at seven-twelfths of an inch. This is a factor in the pitch of voices. It is highly probable that a slight difference also exists between bass and tenor, and between contralto and soprano, but it is difficult to measure with sufficient accuracy.

Ancient Nicknames

The name "Charles" was given to night watchmen in London about 1340 for King Charles I, who improved the police system.

All Queer

Call a woman a chick and she smiles; call her a hen and she howls. Call a young woman a witch and she is pleased; call an old woman a witch and she is indignant. Call a girl a kitten and she likes it; call a woman a cat and she hates you. Women are queer. Call a man a gay dog and flatter him; call him a pup, hound or a cur and he tries to alter the map of your face. He won't mind being called a bull or a bear, yet he resents being called a calf or cub. Men are queer.

Supporting Home Industry

The principle of encouraging closer co-operation between the people of the cities and towns and of the rural districts is growing in favor. In this community several efforts have been made in the past to promote better understanding, friendliness and the spirit of helpfulness, with considerable success. This effort should be revived and continued. It will mean much to the common good of all the people of this community and of this trading area.

Let's Abolish the Drunken Driver

Drunken driving is one of the most condemnable and dangerous evils with which the law has to deal. Every drunken driver is a potential killer and the fact that it is not sufficient argument to keep an intoxicated person away from the driving wheel, that he is chancing the murder of some innocent man, woman or child, necessitates that more forceful means than argument be employed to regulate his habits.

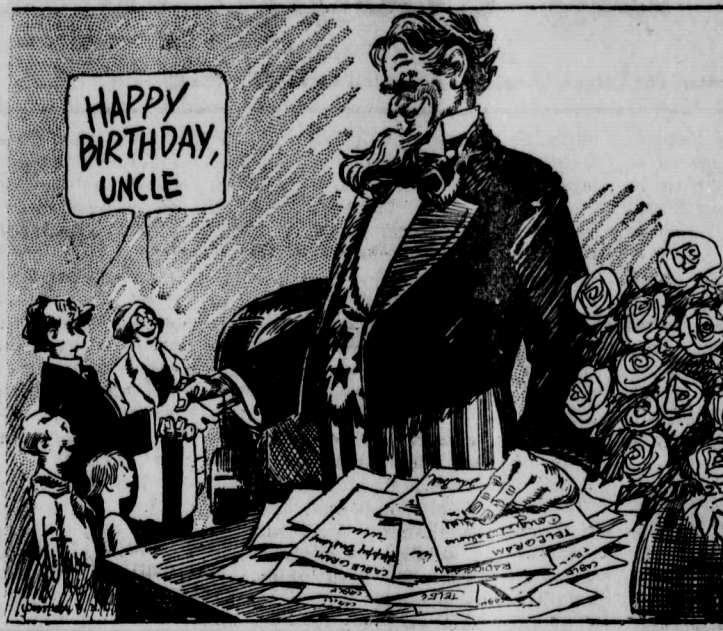

Heavy penalty by the court for the offense is one step in such regulation. The publication of names of such offenders by newspapers is another. The weight that such publication has with the drunken driver is illustrated many times each week at the Standard office when offenders fined by the court have come to plead that their names be omitted from the court list, a favor which in fairness to others in the same predicament, cannot be granted. The disgrace which the average drunken driver feels is brought to his name by such publicity is ample proof of his realization of how badly he has overstepped the boundary of good behavior. It is very seldom indeed that name need ever be repeated for this offense.

The practice of publishing drunken driver names is a national one. It is a weapon of inestimable value to the law of this country and one which no town or newspaper can afford to abolish.

It appears that the recent London disarmament conference might have made more progress had it spent its time scrapping admirals instead of warships.

The success of the Graf Zeppelin in negotiating its 12,000-mile journey over land and sea, mostly sea, is accepted as a matter of course. Verily we are entering the era of air transportation.

FORESTERS AUXILIARY TO BE STARTED HERE

Plans are well under way for the organization of a new lodge, Companions of the Forest of America. An auxiliary order of the Foresters of America.

Mrs. Emma Eads, grand organizer, who is now a resident of Redwood City, and the wives of the members of Foresters lodge are very much encouraged by the number of applications they have so far received.

A card party will be given in Foresters Hall July 16th, for the benefit of the new lodge.

Mrs. Emma Eads expects the organization will be ready for institution some time in August, at which time the grand officers of the Companions of the Forest of America will be in attendance.

DEDICATION OF CURTISS AIR FIELD TO MARK EPOCH IN WESTERN AVIATION

Sensational Events to Feature Opening of New Aviation Industry in County At Beresford, July 4

Led by Rex G. Finney, parachute jumper extraordinary, a huge three-day aerial circus will get underway at San Mateo airport on July 4 in dedication of the new Curtiss-Wright flying school and field.

More than thirty sensational events are scheduled to take place, including six air races, crop-dusting demonstrations, parachute jumps, dead-stick landings, night fireworks, glider exhibitions, balloon bursting and ribbon cutting.

Transforming himself into a human glider, Finney will hurtle through space for more than a thousand feet in a series of crazy aerial maneuvers each day of the show before opening his chute and descending safely to earth. By means of a sail cloth sewn between the legs of his coveralls and attached to his arms, this daring 20-year-old jumper, becomes a flying squirrel upon leaving the plane.

After falling several hundred feet, Finney opens his legs and spreads his arms apart, making a human glider of himself as the tremendous wind pressure strikes the surface of his "sail" and sends him zooming and spinning in a number of uncontrolled motions through the sky. Losing speed and going into a stall, the same as sometimes does a plane in flight, Finney closes his arms and legs and falls again before repeating the maneuver. Several times before opening his chute he will perform the sensational stunt.

The air races will be held each of the afternoons at 2:30 p. m. and 3:00 p. m., with trophies and cash prizes offered to the three winners of each event.

The official dedication will take place Friday immediately following the arrival at the airport of a "Mayors' Special" plane. Mayor Rolph of San Francisco, Mayor Taylor of San Mateo, Mayor Beck of Burlingame, Mayor Stafford of Redwood City and Mayor Lassen of Livermore, will participate in the event.

Crop-dusting and glider demonstrations will be made each day, and as an added attraction two prominent fliers will make speed tests each of the three days at the airport in his new low-wing Lockheed Sirius monoplane, and "Ace" Bragunier will make dead-stick landings with a huge tri-motored Ford plane, the motors of which will be shut off.

In addition to his flying squirrel jumps, Finney will make a night exhibition on the Fourth, immediately following which a display of night fireworks and night flying will take place.

During the three days low rates of "penny-a-pound" for men and $1.00 for women and children will prevail for airplane flights, and each evening flights may be made at double these prices.

PORTLAND'S POPULATION IS 301,311 IN CENSUS

PORTLAND, ORE.—June 29.—(UP)—Portland's total population is 301,311 persons, according to a report sent by wire to Washington, D. C. by Mrs. George T. Gerlinger, census supervisor for the Third district of Oregon Saturday.

City Given Cut In Power Rates

One Point Delivery Ordered By Commission For Municipal Use

After hearing on the complaint of the City of Redwood City, San Mateo County, against Pacific Gas and Electric Company, the Railroad Commission on Tuesday issued an order directing that company to deliver electric energy to the City of Redwood City at one point when the city shall have provided the necessary facilities, for all municipal purposes, and at the rates and under the conditions provided in the company's power schedule No. P-5.

In addition to such order the Commission directed Pacific Gas & Electric Company to file with the Commission, within 60 days, a schedule of rates applying to the delivery of electric energy to municipalities on its system at one point in each city providing the proper facilities, at which point all municipal uses shall be required.

In its complaint against the company the City asked the Commission to determine that the whole-sale power schedule No. P-5 of that company is applicable to the combination of general municipal power service and street lighting service when delivered at a single point and measured by a single metering installation, in lieu of numerous and scattered installations. The City also asked that the Commission establish in place of schedule No. P-5 a special schedule applicable to such combined service. The Commission's order is issued in conformity with this request.

It was pointed out at the hearings on the complaint that the city purchases energy for street lighting, general power and miscellaneous purposes at about a dozen separately metered points of delivery. It desired to receive the bulk of its electric energy at a central point in order that it may receive the benefit of the lower charges resulting from the purchase of a larger volume of energy under one installation as provided under schedule No. P-5.

Efforts to secure the lower rate for the electrical energy used by the city were made by City Manager E. A. Rolison.

MANY ODD SOCIETIES ORGANIZED

By United Press

SAN FRANCISCO, July 1.—(UP)—Like to belong to a society which holds its meetings at 4 o'clock in the morning?

If you joined Dawn Post of the American Legion at Los Angeles, you would have to, for the membership is confined exclusively to night workers.

This unique chapter was described by the California state department of the American Legion, which recently announced that the organization's peak membership was reached this year with the establishment of 28 new posts. Among other unusual or restricted posts is the Chinese-American Post, composed of San Francisco Chinese veterans; a post composed entirely of employees of the Southern California Automobile Club; Overland Post, composed of Union Pacific Railroad employees, and Fighting Bob Evans Post at San Diego, restricted to navy men.

Another new post, the Samuel Gompers, will be started at San Francisco on July 14, with membership restricted to union labor men. State Adjutant James K. Fisk will assist in the installation of officers of the post.

How to Play BRIDGE

Series 1929-30 by Wynne Ferguson

Author of "PRACTICAL AUCTION BRIDGE"

ARTICLE No. 36

Games are never won by passing. They are won only by bidding. But to bid is always to take a risk; it follows that games can be won only by taking risks. But if you take risks, you often will fail in your contracts.

And here I come upon what appears to be a very widespread fallacy; namely, that if you fail to make your contract, you must have made some mistake.

take—either misjudged the strength of your hand, or else played it badly. A large number of people appear to imagine that if you go down 200 above the line you must have committed an error for which you owe your partner an apology or explanation.

The following hands are good illustrations of justifiable overbidding:

Hearts—K, 10, 4
Clubs—9, 8, 5, 3
Diamonds—K, 8, 5
Spades—Q, 9, 2

Hearts—J, 8, 7

No score, rubber game. Z dealt and bid one club. A bid four diamonds to shut out a possible heart or spade bid by Y. The latter bid five clubs and B bid five diamonds.

Z was now obliged to decide whether or not A B could make five diamonds and, if so, whether or not a six club bid would be a good sacrifice. The fact that his partner had given him one raise determined Z to risk six clubs, not with the idea of making it, but solely to prevent a certain game in diamonds by A B. A was now in the happy position of deciding whether he clubs, even though he knew it could not be made. Such a bid is known as a justifiable overbid, and its purpose is to save a game or rubber at as small a cost as possible.

In this instance, A B can make five hearts; so, if A B double five clubs instead of bidding five hearts, Y Z will have saved game and rubber at the expense of only 200 points. Y Z should only lose two clubs, one diamond and one heart trick. Such a loss always is justifiable.

Diamonds are trump and Z is in the lead. How can Y Z win seven of the eight tricks against any defense?

Solution: At trick one, Z should lead the seven of spades and trump in Y's hand with the jack (not the five—see trick number four) of diamonds.

At tricks two and three, Y should lead the queen and eight of clubs, on which Z should discard the jack and ten of hearts. At trick four, Y should lead the five of diamonds and no matter what B plays Z must win this trick and trick five with the king and nine of diamonds. (Note that if Y had not played the jack of diamonds at trick one, the finesse by Z with the nine of diamonds at trick four would not have been possible.)

At trick six, Z should lead the queen of hearts. A can do one of two things: (a) win the trick with the ace of hearts or (b) allow B to win the trick with the king of hearts.

(a) Suppose A wins trick six with the ace of hearts. At trick seven, he must lead a heart into Y's hand, who holds the eight six of hearts over A's seven five and Y must, therefore, win these two tricks.

(b) Suppose B wins trick six with the king of hearts. At trick seven, he must lead a spade into Z's hand, who holds the queen nine of spades over B's ten six. Z must, therefore, win these two tricks.

Played in the foregoing manner, therefore, Y Z must win seven of the eight tricks against any defense.

Sports by Television Near

Football, baseball, cricket and other games may be projected by television, according to Sir Ambrose Fleming, inventor of the Fleming valve. In a recent address before the physical society in London he said this could be accomplished by the use of mirrors. Operators could employ a large mirror in throwing a scanning disk. Behind this mirror could be placed a photo-electric cell, which would have projected on it a brilliant image spot by spot, as the scanning disk rotated. For this to be successful it would be necessary to make the photo-electric cell much more sensitive than those at present in use.

Monte Carlo Bathed in Light

By an elaborate system of exterior illumination, Monte Carlo, the playground of Europe, has been transformed into almost a fairyland of lights. At night the famous casino is bathed in white lights and the broad avenues leading to it are illuminated. Trees, fountains and even flower pots are decorated with concealed lighting effects.

Valuable Chemical

The statement has been made that barium is worth $12,000,000 an ounce, but not because of its scarcity or value—because of the work it does. Barium is a chemical element that is used to coat the filament of vacuum tubes with a saving of $400,000 per gram of barium used. At this rate an ounce would be worth $12,000,000.

Woman Breaks Through Prison Walls

Auburn, N. Y.—Cat Eye Annie Lillian McDowell—forty-eight—famous burglar and one of the most elusive characters of the underworld when outside prison walls, escaped from the Auburn women's prison, but prison authorities are doing their best to lock her up again. Just three weeks after declining to try for freedom with two other inmates who were captured, Annie saved her way out of her cell and escaped.

Cat Eye, who got her nickname from a peculiar cast to one eye, saved through the wood around the lock in her cell door and got over the walls in a manner which left prison officials puzzled several hours afterward.

Only a few days ago she told Warden Frank L. Hancock that Sally Joyce Richards, blond bandit of Buffalo, and Amelia Bascom, badger girl of Brooklyn, approached her to join them in their contemplated escape of April 28. Mystified at the time by this revelation, and puzzled that Cat Eye had turned down the opportunity, prison officials now see her refusal to escape at that time based on a desire to play her old lone wolf part.

At first it was believed that she must still be within the walls, but an extended search of every nook and corner failed to reveal her. Immediately the hunt was started outside the walls by troopers and police through the vicinity. Cities throughout the state were asked to be on the lookout for her.

On a previous escape, after 26 hours of freedom, she was found rain-soaked and exhausted, hidden under a pile of straw a mile and a half east of Weedsport, eight miles north of Auburn.

A clue to her whereabouts was provided on that occasion by word of residents in that vicinity who said they had seen a woman near there acting strangely. She had gone without food for a period of 24 hours.

CAPELET FROCK

Capelet frocks solve the summer wardrobe problem. The one shown here is a red and white print cape that displays a chic shoulder cape.

Due to exposure she contracted pneumonia and nearly died. After recovery she was taken to Matteawan state hospital in the belief that she was becoming insane. Subsequently she was returned here.

The description to the police said she probably wore a blue striped skirt, a blue sweater, black shoes and stockings, and a light top coat and brown Fedora. She was described as 5 foot 4 inches tall, weighing 120 pounds, with medium chestnut hair and light complexion.

Working in the dead of night on her previous escape here, with no tools but a short iron window prop and a spoon, Cat Eye Annie, virtually under the eyes of guards and prison matrons, dug a hole through the brick wall of the cell and, with the aid of a plank taken from the greenhouse, scaled a low wall and slid down an improvised blanket rope to freedom.

Packages of mortar and bits of broken brick were found stuffed in a mattress upon which she had pretended to sleep at night.

Her escape was made in the early morning on that occasion.

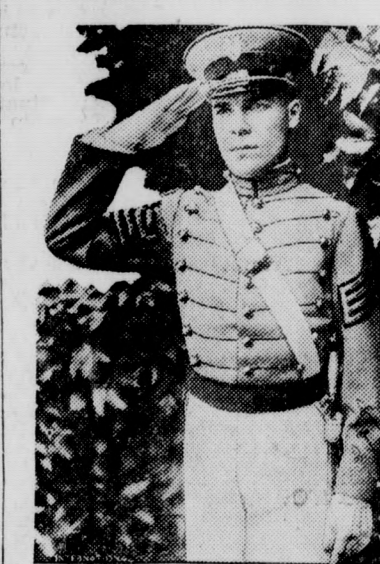

Alcohol Is Easy Winner in Unique Chess Match

Budapest.—Alcohol emerged as winner recently in one of the most unusual games of chess ever played in Hungary. Bottles of wine were used as the pieces, the cork being drawn and the contents of the "piece" consumed as it fell before the onslaught of its opponent. Although spectators were allowed to enjoy the spoils together with the two players, the game had to be called off even before either of the bishops—represented by bottles of famous Hungarian tokay wine—had been captured.

Nose May Know but Not at Ten-Foot Distance

Boston.—Your nose may know, but not at a distance of ten feet, according to a federal court ruling here.

Testifying against Mrs. Catherine Murphy, alleged bootlegger, Dry Agent Charles Bonnell said that although six suspected bottles were ten feet away, he knew they contained liquor because he could smell it.

Court doubted the witness' ability to smell liquor at that distance and let the defendant off with a $1 fine.

Nearly Half Century In Bed

Council Bluffs, Iowa.—Mrs. Mary Wickham of Tipton, Iowa, whose will leaving all her property to the Brooklyn (N. Y.) Watch Tower and Tract society has just been filed for probate, spent forty years in bed as the result of a row.

The property came to Mrs. Wickham on the death of her husband, and it was because Mr. Wickham had not willed to her all his property that she took to her bed and remained there.

Forty-five years ago Mrs. Wickham came from England to marry Mr. Wickham. She asked him to make a will leaving her all his property. He refused, and his will left her only the legal one-third of his estate.

The controversy grew warm. One day, at the close of a particularly violent quarrel, Mrs. Wickham said: "I'm going to bed, and I'm going to stay there until you give in."

"Well, you'll stay there the balance of your life," answered the husband. Mrs. Wickham went to bed that same day. The controversy continued for twenty-five years. Then Wickham died. Mrs. Wickham did not attend the funeral. She stayed in bed.

Once Mrs. Wickham decided to get up and accept her dower share of the estate. But she discovered that during the years she had spent in bed her limbs had withered. She was unable to walk. She got back into bed and stayed there.

During the first twenty years Mrs. Wickham was cared for by neighbors, who used to come in every day. Then she turned against these friends and refused to have anything to do with them. After the death of Wickham she hired a companion.

There are no near relatives, and it is unlikely that the will giving her share of the estate to the Watch Tower and Tract society will be contested.

Working Girls.

Some 50 girl students of Hunter college, a city institution, have earned about $25,000 in less than five months, and one of the girls gets $7 a week for taking a dog for a daily walk. Another earns considerably more giving bridge lessons, and most of the students work in department stores.

Properly Stung.

Not always does the owner of a desirable piece of real estate get the price he is holding out for. A few months ago a real estate firm bought a large parcel of ground near the East river for a de luxe apartment building. It tried to get an additional strip twenty-five feet wide, but the owner of the strip wanted a large price. The firm refused, and built its apartment on a smaller area. Then, on the other side of the profit-seeker, another firm bought another parcel of land for another apartment. It, too, sought the narrow strip. The price was too high, and so another towering building was erected on smaller area. That strip is now between two sixteen-story buildings, and of comparatively little value. It isn't big enough for another apartment building, and the little house now standing on it is unpleasantly overshadowed by its neighbors.

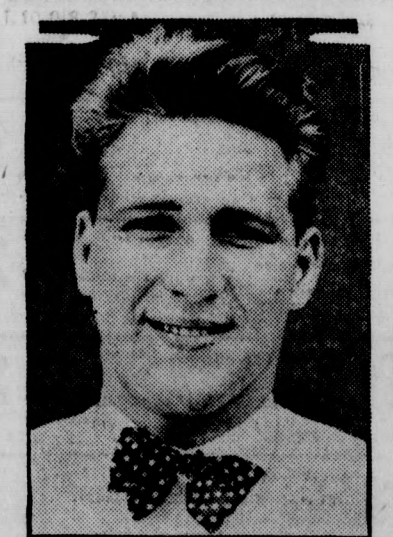

Odd Contract.

A certain playwright of this town, who has been in all kinds of suits and occasionally under indictment for some commercial misadventure, has signed a strange contract with his new lawyer. The basis of the contract is that the playwright is not a bad workman. He isn't in the famous class, but he turns out at least one producible show a year, and that is worth something. So the contract reads that the lawyer guarantees to keep the playwright out of jail for the next five years, in return for 50 per cent of the royalties on anything the playwright turns out.

Making the Readjustment

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

Some one has said that the chief value of education is to help one to meet the unexpected, to adjust himself to a new situation quickly and pleasantly. Whether or not education does give one this ability it is not for me to say, but it is a characteristic which should be cultivated whenever possible. Life brings to many of us quick changes, sudden calls for an absolutely new routine of daily life. It is the wise and happy man who can make these readjustments without wrecking his life, or ruining his happiness.

I have noticed that when men who have reached or passed middle life come up against disaster or are compelled by circumstances to change their occupations or alter the regular routine which habit has established, most of them are unhappy and many of them die quickly.

Cornell, who had been a banker all his life and who had made some money, retired a dozen years ago or so, determined to take life easy. Having sold his business there was nothing regular for him to do. He could sleep late in the morning; he could loaf in the afternoon; he could go to bed as soon as dinner was over. No body would be upset, no business enterprise would be interfered with. He was miserable; he could not make the readjustment. He endured the agony for a few years and then bought out another business and settled happily back into the old routine. Had he not done so I am sure life would have soon ended for him.

Snyder is much more adjustable. He meets a new condition without mental or emotional disturbance. Snyder's business is real estate; his avocation was a young girl upon whom his affections were centered and whom he expected to marry. The girl for a time maintained the same viewpoint. But women's minds are subject to change, and Snyder's fiancée ran into another man more to her liking and she gave Snyder the gate, so to speak, and married the other man. Was he perturbed? Did he grow pale and sink into a decline? Not he. The girl was, of course, a loss, but her marriage opened up a chance for business. The newly married couple would have to live somewhere. Snyder had just the house and the location which would be perfect for them. He tied him at once to his rival and sold him a cottage quite to the girl's taste in a new addition which he had just opened up. He had lost the girl, but he had put over a good business deal at an interesting profit. There was no cause to worry.

I was going to have a quiet evening on Thursday after a tiresome day. I should go nowhere; I should see no one; I should lie in an easy chair before the wood fire and read a detective story. I should go to bed at nine. But it didn't turn out that way. Mrs. Guyer was having a riot with her lodgers and wanted to talk it over with me; Green's appendix had gone

Jap Astronomers Proud of Great Observatory

The largest astronomical observatory in the Far East, and one which is surpassed only by observatories in Germany and the United States, has just been completed in Sanaka, a small suburb of Tokyo. The total cost of the work is put at $200,000. The length of the telescope is 11 meters and the diameter of the lens 26 inches. Work on the building to house this and many other scientific instruments which are included in the observatory equipment has been going on for more than three years under the direction of Doctor Hashimoto, a noted specialist in astronomical instruments. "At last the time has come when Japanese astronomers can work freely," the doctor said after the observatory had been opened. "Although we have had the will to go more deeply into astronomical lines in this country, we have been unable to do so because of lack of equipment. The situation was tantamount to being at war without weapons. We shall now be able to engage in friendly rivalry with our brother astronomers in all parts of the world."

Not of Much Value as Mother's Little Helper

Lady Heath, who made the first woman's solo flight from the Cape to Cairo, is a firm believer that women should have little homes or careers. She has little patience with those who have neither. "They are parasites," she avers.

"When I returned from my African flight I was tendered a big reception," she relates, "at which I met an old friend of mine, who, on the last occasion when I had seen him, was proudly exhibiting a charming little daughter. I inquired about her."

"I suppose by this time she's quite large enough to be a great help to her mother."

"No," sighed my friend, "she won't be of any help to her mother until she can play a better game of bridge."

Getting Out of a Corner

"I know it's a funny thing to ask," said a Kansas City young man, who is getting married in the future, "but would you mind letting me have back that wedding invitation we sent you and your wife?" "Not at all," the friend present right back to the store. "Don't kid me," the married bridegroom-to-be said. "The facts of the matter are that we forgot to invite some distant relatives of the girl's and ran out of invitations, so I'm picking up some from my best friends."

Robin's Hard Luck

An industrious robin came to a sad end at Lewiston, Maine, when he attempted to evade in the matter of building himself a home. Happening on a rather long piece of twine, the little bird flew to the top of an elm tree with it in his mouth. There he became entangled in his burden and shortly found himself suspended about five inches from a small branch with the string wrapped around his neck. He was taken from this precarious position about half an hour later, but he could not be revived.

"flies are highly dangerous" says the U. S. Public Health Service

Menlo Park

At a meeting of Menlo Exchange Club Wednesday evening the following officers were elected for the coming term: T. Bryon Hunnell, president; Harry Chandler, vice-president; secretary and treasurer, Ward E. Monroe; delegates to the National convention in Indianapolis next fall, Barney Larroucou and Eldon Rodgers.

Monday evening last the property owners in Stanford Park met to discuss the question of improving the streets in that vicinity. About thirty taxpayers were present and all agreed that the improvements were needed and that a start should be made in the proceedings. It was agreed that the streets should be 26 feet in width with a four inch rock base and a one and one-half inch top surface. The improvements planned will not be as expensive as the ones abandoned by the council some time ago.

The city council met in special session last Tuesday night. All were present except Anderson. The meeting proved a stormy one although but few speakers were present. The excitement began when Mr. Pembroke, who resides outside the city limits, requested that he be shown the proposed budget and vehemently declared that the public should be made aware of its contents. Pembroke subsided when Blake suggested that he put his request in writing.

The settlement of the George A. Kneese claim for $2710.75 for engineering work done in Stanford Park brought forth much discussion. Mr. Pederson, representing Mr. Kneese, made a fair statement to the council that was promptly accepted. He was willing to drop the fee of $750 and $85 of the overhead charge. The amount finally arrived at was $1875. On motion of Blake, seconded by Crane, the claim was allowed for that amount. Engineer Armstrong thought the bill should be passed upon by other engineers. Again Pembroke, the stormy petrel of the anti again bobbed up, declaring that the claim should be paid by the property owners of Stanford Park and not by the whole city. He threatened to bring an injunction suit and was loudly acclaimed when the mayor quelled him by promptly ordering him to take his seat.

A seller petitioned the council to commence proceedings for street improvements in Stanford Park. Mr. Seiler suggested to send postal cards to all property owners in that district to ascertain their views on the question. The council agreed to do this. The petition was filed.

A resolution declaring weeds and dry grass a nuisance and providing a means for the destruction of same, was adopted after objections offered by Blake. Mr. Farley, the street superintendent said that signs were placed on all vacant property.

A bill board ordinance presented by City Attorney Withworth was adopted.

A Ralph for Governor Club was organized this week at East Palo Alto with A. Groves, the nursery man, as president. There are many Ralph admirers in that section of the county who are giving him genuine support. The mayor's vote there will be large.

A Dr. J. C. McGovern for Corner and Public Administrator Club was organized in Menlo Park last Tuesday evening with a large membership roll. The doctor has many admirers in Menlo Park.

Those wishing to vote at the primary election on August 26 will have to register by July 26 if they have not already done so. Register now. Delay this duty no longer. W. E. Monroe, secretary of the Menlo Park Ralph Club, is registering Ralph admirers every day.

Walter Bassett, wife and pretty daughter and winsome Ruth Johnson, daughter of F. W. Johnson, departed this week for a trip on the Redwood highway and before returning will visit Crater Lake in Oregon. The party will see the sights at Medford, Grants Pass and kindred localities. They will return by way of the Pacific highway, one of the scenic highways of California.

Father Flately departed for his new field of endeavor in San Francisco yesterday. He was accorded numerous farewells receptions during the week. A well-filled purse was given him by the parishioners of the Church of the Nativity on the eve of his departure.

Joseph Toniolo, for some time a gardener for a wealthy family at Atherton, was sent to San Quentin, last Saturday by Judge Buck to serve a sentence from one to fifty years on a statutory charge preferred by a 12-year-old girl.

William Shilliant has sold his barbershop in the Maloney block to Ward E. Monroe, the real estate dealer, who has established Harry Albrecht in charge of the business. Monroe is not a barber, although he sometimes shaves his commissions.

Owing to the rapid growth of the Menlo Junior College, much alterations are taking place on the building to meet the demands to be made upon it by new students next semester. Several boys from here who graduated from Sequoia last month will register at the school when it opens.

Mayor Weeden went to Santa Rosa last Saturday to meet Mayor Rolph. With other mayors, Weeden escorted the mayor to the celebration in the City of Roses in an airplane.

Fourth of July is here, ushered in by the hideous noise of the firecracker in the hands of the youthful patriot. They are boys only once, let them have their fling.

The Menlo Park Ralph for Governor Club is growing in membership. Nearly 200 have already signed the roll. A big rally is being arranged by the members for the near future. On July 13 the club will escort Mayor Rolph to the Native Sons' and Daughters' picnic at Portola where he will make an address.

On Sunday, July 13th, Menlo Parlor N. S. G. W. and N. D. G. W., will give a picnic at New Portola picnic grounds, near Menlo Park. A first class orchestra will play all day for dancing.

Menlo Native Sons are ready to repel the invasion of Redwood and Palo Alto Native Sons in indoor baseball. Palo Alto Native Sons claim to be champions at horse shoe throwing and many other parlor games will try and wrest the laurels from them on that day. Mayor James Rolph will be guest of honor at the picnic and will greet all his friends. Admission 25 cents; children under 10 free. All kinds of games for young and old.
